BAR ADMISSIONS

Alaska

Sean provides natural resource clients and companies doing business in Alaska with a unique combination of experience as a government leader, legislator, administrator, and legal advisor both as in-house counsel and in private practice.

During his years of service as Alaska's Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and as a state Senator and Representative, as well as the Deputy Director of the Department of Natural Resources, Division of Oil and Gas, Sean developed a thorough understanding of all aspects of commercial development in Alaska.

The extensive connections and relationships Sean has fostered at state, federal, and Western regional levels make Sean a valuable resource for clients undertaking infrastructure or natural resource exploration and development projects in Alaska.

From designing and overseeing implementation of natural resources and economic policy at the state and federal levels which resulted in billions of dollars in new investment and thousands of new jobs to Alaska, to leading negotiating teams in the oil and gas arena that facilitated expanded investment in oil and gas development, to directing the team structuring the commercialization of Alaska's North Slope gas resources, to negotiations for roads, rail, hydro, and mining projects, Sean has been involved with virtually every major Alaskan development project over the last 25 years.

As an attorney, Sean's exceptional experience ranges from commercial litigation to negotiating complex commercial transactions as a former partner at Patton Boggs and as a sole practitioner. He also has energy industry and regulatory experience as a former in-house attorney and Director of State Government Relations for ConocoPhillips Alaska.
