Abby helps data center developers, industrial consumers, and non-utility generators address the complex regulatory challenges of securing reliable power supply in today's rapidly evolving energy landscape.

Abby understands how regulatory decisions impact operational viability and works to help clients achieve favorable outcomes in critical proceedings before state public utility commissions and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on issues that affect their power supply strategies. She advocates for large industrial consumer coalitions and data centers in electric utility rate proceedings, service quality matters, certificates of public convenience and necessity, demand side management programs, and rulemaking proceedings. Her practice extends beyond contested proceedings to include electric utility resource planning at both state and regional levels.

With a growing shift toward alternative power supply solutions, clients appreciate Abby’s strategic regulatory counsel to structure and negotiate complex power arrangements, both on a behind-the-meter and remote basis. From her extensive experience representing the regulatory needs of both large load entities and non-utility generators, Abby co-leads the firm's Electric Power and Data Center industry teams.

Abby also represents consumer interests in state legislative affairs, advocating before legislative committees on behalf of her clients. She draws on extensive knowledge of the Federal Power Act, the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978, state and federal regulations, and electric utility tariffs to help clients advance both renewable and dispatchable generation projects.

Before joining Holland & Hart, Abby represented municipal utility interests in Federal Energy Regulatory Commission proceedings.

She served on the Board of the Colorado Chapter of the Women's Energy Network as inaugural President-Elect (2017-2018) and President (2019), and on the Board of the global Women's Energy Network Foundation (2023-2024).

Abby is part of Holland & Hart’s public utilities regulatory team and frequently works with Thor Nelson, Michelle King, Nik Stoffel, Austin Rueschhoff, Austin Jensen, Kristine Roach, Fripp Prioleau, and Seamus Crowley.
