Bradley Boodt serves as counsel to some of the most successful real estate and renewable energy developers and lenders throughout Colorado, Nevada, and New Mexico.

Experience: For thirty years, Brad has advised clients in connection with the development and financing of some of the most prominent commercial real estate and renewable energy projects that have been built in the Mountain West. He has an active presence in the West's thriving renewable energy sector, representing developers and lenders in the development, financing, and construction of some of the largest wind and solar energy projects ever built in the United States. His clients also include the developers of large master planned communities, retail centers, multi-family projects, stadiums, high rise, mixed-used condominium projects, and office developments. He regularly assists clients and law firms from across the United States with respect to the financing of their projects in Colorado, Nevada, and New Mexico.

Geographic Reach: Utilizing Holland & Hart's strategic footprint, which spans across eight states in the Mountain West, Brad is able to provide clients with the skills they need to efficiently and effectively develop sophisticated real estate and energy projects, including tax, regulatory, permitting, environmental, due diligence, financing, and intellectual property.

Leadership and Commitment: From 2015 through 2017, Brad served as one of the five members of Holland & Hart's Management Committee, which oversees the management and strategic direction of the entire firm. Prior to that, he served for over four years as the practice group leader for the firm's real estate, finance, construction, and corporate reorganizations practice. He currently serves on the Downtown Denver Awards Jury, which identifies and honors outstanding projects, entities and organizations in downtown Denver.
