Randy provides invaluable expertise in resolving complex business disputes, with a focus on guiding clients through the intricate legal process surrounding the protection and enforcement of intellectual property rights.

His vast experience includes specific involvement in patent litigation in the Eastern District of Texas, a core specialty and asset in his practice, as well as federal courts throughout the country. Equally adept at litigation, dispute resolution, and risk management, Randy enables his clients—ranging from start-ups to multinational Fortune 500 companies—to concentrate on their central business operations. His clientele is diverse, operating globally in sectors as varied as software, hardware, mobile applications, microchips, and mechanical engineering.

Randy's well-honed skills extend to mitigating competitive and legal challenges involving patents, trademarks, copyrights, trade secrets, false advertising, and comprehensive litigation. He has represented clients before both state and federal courts and administrative bodies like the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board and the United States International Trade Commission.

Before joining Holland & Hart, Randy honed his legal acumen as an associate in the Eastern District of Texas, where his experience and skills were enriched by dealing with a wide array of patent litigation and intellectual property rights enforcement.
