Alyssa offers guidance to clients on a variety of energy and infrastructure projects throughout the lifecycle of a project, from early-stage development, financing, to acquisition and divestiture.

With a passion for sustainability and innovation, Alyssa is dedicated to helping clients in the oil and gas, biofuel, solar, wind, conventional power, and data center sectors navigate the complex legal landscape of energy and infrastructure projects. She helps data center developers and operators pursue sustainable growth by supporting the drafting of renewable energy partnership agreements and helping clients address legal considerations to operationalize integrated clean energy solutions. Leveraging her project experience background, she assists her clients in negotiating their project development agreements and construction contracts and helps facilitate their solutions and goals. She is experienced in representing clients in their asset and company acquisitions, project financing and development, and carbon capture transactions. Alyssa also assists companies on general corporate matters in connection with mergers and acquisitions and other commercial transactions.

Prior to joining Holland & Hart, Alyssa worked as an associate at Baker Botts LLP in Texas, primarily assisting domestic and international clients on a range of energy-related matters. She also worked at an Am Law 200 firm as an associate in the energy projects group. Prior to law school, Alyssa was a financial analyst at a multinational energy company where she focused on upstream oil and gas transactions.
