Andy represents clients in workplace safety matters, regulatory enforcement actions, and related litigation. He guides companies through government investigations, emergency response scenarios, and compliance with state and federal safety regulations. Andy defends clients in enforcement proceedings before administrative agencies, including OSHA and state regulatory bodies, and handles subsequent appeals. He also represents companies in personal injury litigation and other complex commercial disputes arising from workplace incidents.

His trial-tested litigation experience spans all phases of state and federal court proceedings, from initial pleadings through trial and appeal. Andy has persuasively argued before state courts and federal appellate courts, conducted depositions, and examined witnesses in evidentiary hearings.

Prior to joining Holland & Hart, Andy was an associate at a Denver renewable energy and public utilities law firm and worked as an associate at an Am Law 200 firm. Andy also served as a law clerk to Chief Justice Nancy Rice (ret.) of the Colorado Supreme Court.

EXPERIENCE

Andy supports clients on a variety of matters including:

- Workplace safety compliance, including OSHA and MSHA
- Natural resources litigation
- National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) litigation
- Personal injury defense
- Complex commercial disputes
- Permitting and regulatory compliance
