Weston offers legal counsel to clients throughout all stages of the construction lifecycle.

Weston assists clients with construction projects, including development and construction contracts, commercial property matters, and leasing agreements. He supports property owners, developers, contractors, and investors in addressing their legal needs and business objectives. He also has experience in litigation support and dispute resolution from his work on civil liability and premises defense matters.

Before joining Holland & Hart, Weston participated in the firm's Summer Clerk program, where he gained valuable experience working closely with the construction projects team. He also served as a judicial extern for Judge Jacob A. Reynolds of the Eighth Judicial District Court. Weston served as a construction laborer and heavy equipment operator for several years before attending law school.
