

Montana Employment Law Letter

Montana Employment Law Letter

Insight — 5/20/2000 12:00:00 AM

The Montana Supreme Court has come up with a new twist to the Montana Workers' Compensation Act. Now the employer may have an obligation to preserve machinery or equipment involved in an employee's injury. Failure to do so can result in liability. You can read about the details in "Don't Touch That Machine," an article written by Holland & Hart employment lawyer Jeanne Bender and published in the Montana Employment Law Letter.

Subscribe to get our Insights delivered to your inbox.

This publication is designed to provide general information on pertinent legal topics. The statements made are provided for educational purposes only. They do not constitute legal or financial advice nor do they necessarily reflect the views of Holland & Hart LLP or any of its attorneys other than the author(s). This publication is not intended to create an attorney-client relationship between you and Holland & Hart LLP. Substantive changes in the law subsequent to the date of this publication might affect the analysis or commentary. Similarly, the analysis may differ depending on the jurisdiction or circumstances. If you have specific questions as to the application of the law to your activities, you should seek the advice of your legal counsel.