

Kevin Murray

Partner
801.799.5919
Salt Lake City
krmurray@hollandhart.com

The Future Is As We Now See It – Environmental Development Resiliency and Disaster Planning

Insight — 06/17/2020

American College of Environmental Lawyers (ACOEL)

Successful real estate developers and development attorneys must effectively anticipate and manage risk. Management of visible and known risks seem simple; what separates the great from the good is the ability to anticipate, plan for, and develop contingencies for unknown risk scenarios.

Kevin Murray, an environmental partner in Holland & Hart's Salt Lake City office, authored the article titled "The Future Is As We Now See It — Environmental Development Resiliency and Disaster Planning," published on the American College of Environmental Lawyers (ACOEL) June 17, 2020 blog. Murray explores how successful future real estate development must consider environmental development resiliency and the impacts of foreseeable extreme conditions, including global pandemics.

To read the full article, click here.

Subscribe to get our Insights delivered to your inbox.

This publication is designed to provide general information on pertinent legal topics. The statements made are provided for educational purposes only. They do not constitute legal or financial advice nor do they necessarily reflect the views of Holland & Hart LLP or any of its attorneys other than the author(s). This publication is not intended to create an attorney-client relationship between you and Holland & Hart LLP. Substantive changes in the law subsequent to the date of this publication might affect the analysis or commentary. Similarly, the analysis may differ depending on the jurisdiction or circumstances. If you have specific questions as to the application of the law to your activities, you should seek the advice of your legal counsel.